A gender gap with a capital 'G'

Non-college-educated white men flock to Donald Trump

Hillary Clinton's quest to become the first woman president produced a gender gap with a capital "G" — but the non-college-educated white men flocking to Donald Trump had a lot to do with it.

Tuesday's election was on track to produce one of the largest gender gaps since 1972, when the first national exit poll was taken.

The gender gap for Clinton — the difference between the number of men who voted for her and the number of women who voted for her — hit 13 percentage points in preliminary results of exit polls conducted for The Associated Press and television networks by Edison Research.

Clinton's support among women was roughly even with the support that women gave Barack Obama in 2008 and 2012. The bigger factor in this year's wide gender gap: less-educated white men, who favoured Trump far more heavily than they did Republican Mitt Romney in 2012 or GOP nominee John McCain in 2008.

Trump, who once famously declared that he loved the uneducated, got plenty of love from white voters who never graduated from college: He got 7 in 10 votes from non-college-educated white men and 6 in 10 votes from non-college-educated white women.

Clinton, meanwhile, got the support of less than a quarter of white men without a college degree; Obama, by contrast, drew about a third of their votes four years ago. Clinton did make some inroads with college-educated white women. Just over half supported her, while four years ago just over half of that group had backed Romney. Other findings from the exit poll:

MILLENNIAL MAGIC

Clinton managed to hang on to the millennials who were such a big part of Obama's winning coalition.

Young people age 18-29 supported Clinton over Trump by nearly as strong a margin as their support of Obama over Romney in 2012.

Those between 30 and 44 also were much more likely to support Clinton than Trump. Trump won the favour of those 45 and over.

HOLDING THEIR NOSES

Americans held their noses as they picked between Clinton and Trump: More than half of voters cast their ballots with reservations about their candidate or because they disliked the others running.

That was true both for those backing Democrat Hillary Clinton and those supporting Republican Donald Trump, the exit polls showed.

After a long, hard-fought campaign, just 4 out of 10 voters strongly favoured their candidate. That's a marked shift from 2012, when about two-thirds of voters said they were voting because they strongly favoured their candidate.

The prospect of a Clinton or Trump victory was downright scary to plenty of voters: Seven in 10 Clinton voters said they'd feel scared by Trump victory; 6 in 10 Trump voters felt the same about a Clinton win.

WOMEN'S ISSUES VS. EMAIL ISSUES

After all of the sound and fury over Trump's treatment of women, it turned out the issue bothered half of all voters a lot — and women were more concerned about it than men.

About 6 in 10 women were bothered a lot, compared to about 4 in 10 men, the exit poll found.

The partisan divide on the issue was stark: More than 8 in 10 Clinton voters were bothered a lot by the GOP candidate's treatment of women, compared to about 1 in 10 Trump voters.

It turned out voters were somewhat less concerned about Clinton's use of a private email server as secretary of state.

That issue mattered a lot to about four in 10 voters, including about 9 in 10 Trump voters. Less than 1 in 10 Clinton's supporters were bothered a lot.

TO BE HONEST ...

Neither Trump nor Clinton gets bragging rights when it comes to honesty.

About 6 out of 10 voters said they don't view Clinton as honest and about the same share felt the same way about Trump.

Does anyone think both of these candidates are honest? That number was in single digits.

Clinton campaign ponders President

'We can smell the win,': Campaign manager

An unexpectedly excellent showing by Trump in states around the country turned the U.S. presidential election into a tense Tuesday cliffhanger, with numerous key states too close to call at press time.

The early results showed a nation driven by racial and geographic divisions, and they belied polls that suggested a comfortable victory for Hillary Clinton. By 9:30 p.m., it was clear that an astonishing Trump upset was highly possible — though he still needed several states to go his way.

A Trump victory would give immense power to an erratic, never-elected Republican businessman whose behaviour and policy positions have alarmed much of the world and who would face no organized opposition in Congress.

Republicans retained control of the House of Representatives and appeared likely to keep the Senate. Trump managed to eke out a lead in Florida, one of his must-win states, on the strength of high white turnout in rural counties. He won Ohio, where he had led for much of the past month, and North Carolina, where polls had shown a dead heat. "Absolutely buoyant," Kellyanne Conway, Trump's campaign manager, told Yahoo News. "We can smell the win."

Clinton, vying to become the first female president, carried Virginia and New Mexico, where she had been expected to win. She still had a path to victory as of 10:30 p.m., but her so-called "blue wall" in long-Democratic northern states had dissipated in the face of what appeared to be a Trump wave.

Clinton and President Barack Obama had called for a comprehensive rejection of Trumpism — his disparagement of women and minority groups, his disdain for democratic norms, his rage. Instead, it appeared the best she could hope for was a squeaker of a victory.

Trump was dominant with rural and exurban white voters, compensating for a surge in Hispanic support in favour of Clinton. Win or lose, his competitiveness was a remarkable achievement for a candidate who has outraged much of the country.

To pull it off, Trump needed upset wins in states where he had long trailed — some combination of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nevada and New Hampshire. His initial numbers in most of them looked better than most polls had forecast, with Michigan particularly worrisome for Clinton.

Mathematical models, crunching polling data, had given the former secretary of state, senator and first lady anywhere between a 70-per-cent and 99-per-cent chance of winning. By 9:30 p.m., the New York Times forecast was down to 50-50. By 10 p.m., the forecast gave Trump a 63-per-cent chance.

Clinton held her "victory" party at a New York City convention centre with a glass ceiling, a metaphor for the gender barrier she had hoped to break. But the mood turned glum fast.

People watch voting results at Democratic presidential nominee former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's election night event at the J...

"So this isn't fun," Jon Favreau, former speechwriter for President Barack Obama, wrote on Twitter.

Stock markets tanked on the early results; investors have made clear their preference for Clinton stability over Trump's promise of radical change. Trump's election may precipitate a global crisis of confidence.

But much of America rejected the global consensus. Trump, who was widely considered a laughing-stock when he launched his candidacy with a rambling speech in June of last year, defied the odds and the pundits again, just as he said he would.

Trump thrilled millions of white voters with his outrage-courting refusal to be "politically correct," his vow to restore a bygone era of American glory, and scorched-earth attacks on elites, Muslims and immigration. The former reality television star managed to stay in the running despite an incessant stream of scandals, gaffes, lies and insults that would have sunk any traditional politician.

And he did so while running far fewer ads than Clinton and without the benefit of Clinton's first-rate get-out-the-vote operation. He was thriving on the strength of his persona and message alone.

Clinton asked voters to choose "love and kindness" over "all of this hate-filled rhetoric, all of these insults and scapegoating, and finger-pointing and insulting." She ran as the candidate of diversity, prudence and civic harmony, begging moderate Republicans to temporarily put aside party to save the country.

She was hoping to win with the so-called "Obama coalition": African-Americans, Hispanics and Asians; young people; and college-educated white people.

"What you're seeing is the rise of the Clinton coalition," Clinton spokesman Brian Fallon told CBS. "Hillary Clinton has not just re-assembled that Obama coalition but actually expanded on it."

There were worrying signs, though, that black turnout had fallen from the heights of the Obama era. In exit polls, Clinton remained unpopular with a majority of the voting public. And it seemed that Trump's oft-repeated mockery of the polls had merit. He outperformed predictions in states from the deepest south to the Canadian border.

Florida, as usual, was particularly close, whipsawing from a narrow Clinton lead to a narrow Trump lead as results came in from different counties. The state's divides mirrored those of the nation more broadly.

"Her margins in the urban areas are basically records. His margins in exurban areas are basically records. It is a pretty crazy map here," Steve Schale, Florida director for Obama's 2008 campaign, wrote on Twitter. Trump's rhetoric and past helped Clinton win the votes, if not the affections, of a substantial number of white professional women who usually vote Republican. An NBC early exit poll showed her up 51 per cent to 43 per cent with college-educated white women, a group Mitt Romney won over Obama in 2012.

And Clinton benefited from a boom in Hispanic voting that was missed by many of the pre-election polls. Trump, whose signature policy pledge was a giant wall on the Mexican border, ended up being challenged by voters with family ties to Mexico.

Voting lines were long around the country, an indication of intense voter interest in a surreal race that centred on emotional questions of personal and national identity. Exit polls had voters reporting they were sad, anxious and angry.

In its final weeks, the wild campaign veered from surprise to surprise: the leak of a 2005 tape in which Trump appeared to say he had groped women without their consent, an FBI announcement of a new investigation into Clinton's emails, a subsequent announcement that the investigation was over.

Trump did not sound during the day like a confident candidate. In an unprecedented series of interviews during the voting, he said the system was "rigged" and that "you hear so many horrible stories" about voting fraud.

World reacts to American election

CHINA

Chinese state media outlets are casting the U.S. election as the embodiment of America's democracy in crisis in contrast to China's perceived stability under authoritarian rule.

The state-run Xinhua News Agency says the campaign has highlighted that, in its words, "the majority of Americans are rebelling against the U.S.'s political class and financial elites."

The official Communist Party newspaper People's Daily says in a commentary that the presidential election reveals an "ill democracy."

MEXICO

The Mexican peso has fallen sharply against the U.S. dollar as early returns show a tight race for the White House.

Financial research firm FactSet says the currency is currently trading at 20.45 to the dollar. The Bank of Mexico's interbank rate stood at 18.42 at the end of Tuesday's trading day.

The peso has closely tracked the U.S. presidential race during the campaign, hardening when Clinton's chances are seen as bullish and weakening when Donald Trump is seen as rising.

Trump has threatened to renegotiate the North American Free Trade Agreement and vows to build a wall along the United States' southern border and force Mexico to pay for it.

Republicans on track to keep House control

Republicans held onto a key Senate seat in Florida on Tuesday as their hopes of protecting their narrow majority rested on a handful of states that were toss-ups until the end.

Incumbent GOP Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida won re-election over Democratic Rep. Patrick Murphy. The outcome was not unexpected since Murphy had been abandoned by his own party in the final weeks of the campaign, but polls had tightened heading into Election Day.

Rubio won as GOP incumbents around the country faced energized Democratic challengers trying to oust them in costly and caustic battles shadowed every step of the way by the polarizing presidential race between Republican Donald Trump and Democrat Hillary Clinton.

As polls closed Tuesday evening, GOP Sen. Rob Portman of Ohio won a second term, as expected. Battleground Ohio was forecast early on to be one of the most competitive Senate races, but Portman ran a strong and disciplined campaign against former Democratic Gov. Ted Strickland, and Democrats long ago abandoned hope they could prevail in the state.

Democrats held onto seats in Connecticut and Maryland, where Democratic Rep. Chris

Van Hollen will replace the longest-serving female senator, Democrat Barbara Mikulski, who retired.

But in GOP-held North Carolina, Missouri and New Hampshire, it looked like it could go either way as voting progressed. The races were also close in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Nevada, the one Democratic-held seat that was hotly contested this election.

End of an ugly affair

Voting machine break, fights at polling stations and a shooting

Long lines, malfunctioning machines, a Trump campaign lawsuit, allegations of voter harassment and a shooting that locked down two California polling stations — for American voters on Tuesday, an ugly and messy election season came to an ugly and messy end.

Fears of widespread election-day violence failed to materialize on Tuesday, though Californians endured a few tense hours after gunfire erupted near a polling station in Azusa, a city 40 kilometres east of Los Angeles.

The shooting forced the lockdown of two polling stations but police said late Tuesday that it was unrelated to the election and they still had no motive. The gunman and a male victim in his 70s were killed, with two other people injured; at least one of the victims was also on their way to vote, the Los Angeles Times reported.

But outside of Azusa, U.S. voters encountered more typical polling station dramas: long line-ups, malfunctioning machines, assorted annoyances and isolated pockets of voter harassment.

The day did begin, however, with a Donald Trump trademark lawsuit. Early Tuesday, the Republican candidate's campaign filed a lawsuit in Nevada — one of several states that allows early voting — alleging that voters were allowed to cast their ballots past deadline last week.

In Nevada, people standing in line when the polls close at 8 p.m. are allowed to cast their ballots. The Trump campaign is alleging, however, that election officials violated state law by allowing people to join the line even after the cut off time.

The lawsuit — which was quickly rejected by a Nevada judge — was widely perceived as an attempt to suppress Hispanic voters in an important swing state. The polling station was located outside of a Mexican supermarket in Las Vegas, a Clinton stronghold.

While election day was largely peaceful, civil rights groups logged a high number of complaints from voters reporting harassment or suppression. As of early Tuesday evening, some 30,000 calls had already been received by a national voter complaint hotline; according to civil rights groups, a large proportion of them were from African-American and Latino voters.

According to Election Protection, an organization operating a hotline, voters complained about being directed to the wrong polling places, learning that their names had been purged from voter rolls, being wrongly told to fill out provisional ballots, and being improperly asked for identification or forced to wait in long lines. Voters in Florida also reported people "using megaphones aggressively" and in Jacksonville, an "unauthorized individual" was also found inside a polling station, according to Kristen Clarke, president of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, during a press conference.

There were also reports in Hollywood, Fla. of "aggressive individuals hovering around" voters as the approached polling sites, she added. "Some have turned away because they did not feel able to freely cast (a) ballot."

A few skirmishes were also reported Tuesday. In Michigan, authorities had to break up a shoving match between a Hillary Clinton supporter and another voter supporting Trump.

In Florida, an altercation between a male Clinton supporter and a female Trump supporter outside of a Palm Beach polling station also led to the man being pepper sprayed and the woman allegedly punched.

Across the country, there were scattered reports of machines that didn't work properly, including in Durham, N.C., a computerized system for verifying voter registration failed in several precincts.

★ George W. Bush votes 'none of the above'

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

George W. Bush didn't beat around the bush when it came to his voting record Tuesday.

As the polls closed, the former Republican president confirmed he declined to vote for Donald Trump, instead leaving his presidential ballot blank.

Spokesman Freddy Ford told the media that Bush, who served as president from 2001 to 2009, voted "none of the above" for president but supported Republican candidates in congressional and local races.

The rebuke was not unexpected. Bush's father, former president George H.W. Bush, was quoted as saying he would vote for Hillary Clinton, and no member of the Bush family endorsed or supported Trump.

Former first lady Barbara Bush actually criticized Trump in February, calling his derogatory comments about FOX News host Megyn Kelly "unbelievable."

Bush's brother, Florida Governor Jeb Bush, had been considered a frontrunner for the Republican nomination before he was outflanked by the Trump campaign during the primaries.

★ Memes mirror Canada's U.S. election feelings

A mother moose stares at a car in flames while two calves chill out in an inflatable pool.

The caption reads: "How it feels to be a Canadian watching U.S. politics right now."

That's the tone of the #MeanwhileInCanada hashtag, pages and accounts on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter on the day of America choosing a new president.

The popular hashtag has been trending on all three social networks throughout election day.

Another offering shows a moving van and references Republican candidate Donald Trump. It's accompanied by an obscene phrase about how he'll help the moving van industry here.

There's also a man panhandling in traffic with a sign that reads, "Give me a dollar or I'm voting for Trump."

That caption reads, "How to become an instant millionaire."

Other entries are more tame, like: "I can't wait to watch the season finale of America."

Other entries are wishing luck: "Wishing our American friends good luck with today's #Election. Meanwhile in Canada, we're just enjoying the ride."

Another entry references Trump's pledge to build a wall between the U.S. and Mexico.

It suggests that the bitter American election is benefiting Canadian construction: "Meanwhile in Canada... we're building a wall along the 49th Parallel (look it up!), and at Niagara Falls, Queenston Heights and Fort Erie."

DISASTER

Street collapses in Japanese city core

Parts of a main street collapsed in the heart of a major city in southern Japan on Tuesday, creating a massive sinkhole and cutting off power, water and gas supplies to parts of the city.

Authorities said no injuries were reported from the pre-sunrise collapse in downtown Fukuoka, which created a sinkhole more than half the size of an Olympic pool in the middle of the business district.

The cause of the collapse is under investigation, Fukuoka officials said, but they linked it to ongoing subway construction nearby. A smaller sinkhole occurred in Fukuoka in 2014 at another location of the subway construction.

Fukuoka, a city of more than 1.5 million people, is about 1,000 kilometres southwest of Tokyo. The massive cave-in appeared in the city's bustling Hakata district, a major business and entertainment centre, with muddy underground water flowing into the hole.

The incident prompted the evacuation of some residents in nearby buildings. Officials were concerned that further erosion inside the sinkhole could prompt nearby structures to collapse.

"An accident like this is unheard of, one that should not have happened," Fukuoka Mayor Soichiro Takashima said. "We must prevent secondary accidents, and will do our utmost to restore important infrastructure."

Investigators dig into mass grave

The stench of death drew Iraqi soldiers to the unsettled plot of land freshly liberated from Daesh fighters.

When a bulldozer scraped the ground, bones poked from just beneath the surface, along with clothing scraps, garbage bags, human remains swarming with flies — and even a child's stuffed animal.

About 100 bodies, many of them decapitated, are suspected to be buried in what is likely the latest mass grave left by the retreating jihadis, officials said.

Investigators on Tuesday began their probe of the site, located near an agricultural school in the town of Hamain al-Jil.

The gruesome discovery by troops advancing on militant-held Mosul fits a pattern in territory retaken from Daesh. The extremist group killed hundreds as it swept across northern and central parts of Iraq in 2014 and is believed to have carried out a brutal crackdown since the Oct. 17 start of an offensive to recapture the country's second-largest city.

In Geneva, the UN human-rights office said it was investigating if the site was connected to reports about the alleged killing of police in the same area.

World wars, Korea saw 500 lose their lives

Indigenous people across Canada remembered ancestors and community members who fought and died in war as they marked National Aboriginal Veterans Day on Tuesday.

More than 12,000 indigenous people joined the Canadian military in the First and Second World Wars and Korea. More than 500 were killed and countless more were injured.

Veterans Affairs Minister Kent Hehr said more indigenous people served in those conflicts than any other ethnic group, as a percentage of total population.

"From the beginning of our country, our First Nations people have fought bravely and boldly and sacrificed a great deal for this nation," he said in an interview.

Of the Canadian military's 95,000 full- and part-time service members, more than 2,500 are indigenous people.

Trudeau to retrace father's steps in Cuba

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau will retrace some of his father's most historic footsteps next week when he travels to Cuba and quite possibly meets an old family friend — retired Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

Officially, Trudeau will meet with Cuban President Raul Castro, who took over his country's leadership in 2008 from his brother, the leader of Cuba's communist revolution in 1959 and the decades-long antagonist to the United States.

Cuba's ambassador to Canada says there may also be an opportunity to visit with Fidel Castro too.

"I think this question has been worked out, and there is a chance. I don't know how it will end," ambassador Julio Garmendia Pena said Monday.

"I'm sure Fidel would like to meet him, and it would be a great opportunity for him to say hello to a friend of his father, and for Fidel to greet his closest friend's son as a prime minister."

Fidel Castro has maintained a sporadic public profile since he formally ceded control of the Caribbean island country, 135 kilometres off the southern tip of Florida, to his younger brother. He has met world leaders, including the visiting president of Portugal just weeks ago, and Pope Francis last year, said Pena.

Pierre Trudeau became the first NATO leader to visit Cuba when he touched down on Jan. 26, 1976 with his wife Margaret, and his then four-month-old son Michel in tow.

The three-day visit rankled some of Canada's allies as Margaret Trudeau sang to Castro, while Trudeau at one point exhorted, "Viva Castro."

"From a personal point of view, it impressed us that he came to Cuba with his family," Castro told the CBC National Magazine in an October 2000 interview. "I met that little baby when he came here when he wasn't even four months old, and he won everyone's heart."

Two years later, Castro made a stunning appearance at Pierre Trudeau's funeral in Montreal.

City seeks tenants for vacant tower

DEVELOPMENT

Councillor floats idea of Liquor and Lotteries office

Stephanie Taylor
Metro | Winnipeg

The City of Winnipeg is still waiting to learn whether a mostly vacant tower attached to police headquarters is in the red.

On Tuesday, the planning, property and development committee unanimously endorsed a plan to give Shelter Canadian Properties Limited a shot at redeveloping an 11-story building at 266 Graham Ave. into commercial space.

"It's a very good first step to get that building reused," committee chairman Coun. John Orlikow said of the decision.

The city purchased the former Canada Post tower in 2009 as part of a $30-million deal to buy an attached warehouse, which underwent years of renovations — not to mention millions in cost overruns — being converted into the new home of the Winnipeg Police Service.

The tower was intended to be resold for $18 million, but officials later discovered it required $20 million worth of repairs — a price tag Orlikow says may change depending on Shelter's own analysis.

The building has sat two-thirds empty since the federal government vacated its offices in late 2014, and cost the city millions in missed revenue and maintenance.

John Kiernan, director of the planning, property and development department, recommended the city enter into an agreement with Shelter to give them six months to explore what it would cost to renovate the space to make it leasable. No exact design plans were discussed on Tuesday.

Orlikow said if it were up to him, the province would headquarter its Manitoba Liquor and Lotteries offices in the building, despite a recent decision to stay put.

"Why not? We'd be more than happy to work with the province. It's a public good to public good. Maybe the federal government needs something," he said.

Kiernan underlined the building needs major reinvestment, given the fact some features of the 50-year-old structure have reached the end of useful life.

Because the tower is connected to the new police headquarters, police assisted with a screening process to weed out any risks of counter-surveillance.

He said residential developments were out of the question due to an inability to control the amount of people moving in and out of the space.

"Let's say someone rents out an apartment, do they have to do some kind of security check each time," he said.

Designs for 2017 warming huts unveiled

Jessica Botelho-Urbanski
For Metro | Winnipeg

Forget making America great again.

On the U.S. Election Day, Paul Jordan, CEO of The Forks Renewal Corporation, joked about making the Red River Mutual Trail great again this winter, with help from six new warming huts designed by architects around the globe.

The new huts will join about 16 structures from years past, said a Forks spokeswoman. The trail likely won't open until around the third week of January, Jordan said.

There were more than 100 design submissions this year, from here and away. Expect an ode to trains from a 17-year-old Winnipeg high school student and what looks like a hollowed-out ice cube from a famed architect based in London, England.

Sean Kohli, a Grade 12 student from Nelson McIntyre

Collegiate, designed "On the Rails" as a class project.

The boxcar will be mostly made of wood and is "an homage to the junction era of The Forks, which used to be a large rail yard," Kohli said. He later admitted he was somewhat nervous to be surrounded by so many professional designers.

"I'm a 17-year-old without any professional credentials and I'm here with world-class architects," he said.

The Forks invited famous London-based designer Anish Kapoor to design a hut this year. Kapoor's design for Winnipeg is called "Stackhouse" and looks like a five-metre tall block of ice with a rounded centre where guests can step inside.

Three more of the huts were chosen by a blind jury: "Ice Lantern" from Nova Scotia, "Open Border" from the Netherlands and "Greetings from Bubble Beach" from Chicago.

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBER

Mayor Katz portrait ready to be unveiled

Stephanie Taylor
Metro | Winnipeg

Former mayor Sam Katz is making a return to Winnipeg's corridors of power.

Well, at least a portrait of him is.

A spokesperson from the mayor's office said Tuesday that Katz's portrait will be publicly unveiled on Nov. 16.

"It is tradition that portraits of previous Mayors be commissioned, and then are displayed on the walls inside the Council chamber," Jonathan Hildebrand wrote in an email to Metro.

Katz served as the city's 42nd mayor for a decade, ultimately deciding not to run for re-election in 2014, leaving room for then-lawyer Brian Bowman to take the city's top job.

Katz's legacy includes high-profile real estate scandals, such as a fire hall deal and the purchase and subsequent renovations of a new police headquarters building that remains under RCMP investigation.

Possible Ebola exposure

An employee at the National Centre for Foreign Animal Disease in Winnipeg may have been exposed to the Ebola virus, thanks to a split in the seam of his protective suit.

The lab director said all proper emergency procedures were followed and the risk to the employee, co-workers and the community is considered to be low. THE CANADIAN PRESS

In the Nov. 8 edition of Metro, the headline for an article on page 6 incorrectly stated the current University of Manitoba strike is the "longest in university's history." This is not true. It's the longest strike this century. We regret the error.

Words of hope for America

This is the image Metro's cartoonist drew to sum up her feelings about the campaign. Here's what she had to say: I did this cartoon thinking about what I believe the priority should be when choosing a government: People's well-being. Us humans should take care of each other. We should be fair. We should be together. The United States is the most influential country in the world, and whatever happens there will trickle down to the rest of the planet. That's why my wish for them is that hope and love can prevail, and that they stay strong and work hard on the creation of a happier country. That in turn will help create a happier and healthier world.

Prince Harry calls out racism

ROYAL FAMILY

Scrutiny of relationship compared to Princess Diana

Prince Harry condemned the media for subjecting girlfriend Meghan Markle to "a wave of abuse and harassment," issuing a highly unusual statement Tuesday that confirmed his relationship with the American actress and expressed concern for her safety.

Harry's office said that while the 32-year-old prince understood that there was significant curiosity about his private life, a line had been crossed in terms of media intrusion. Harry said the statement was issued in hopes media driving the story will "pause."

"Prince Harry is worried about Ms. Markle's safety and is deeply disappointed that he has not been able to protect her," said the statement from Kensington Palace. "It is not right that a few months into a relationship with him that Ms. Markle should be subjected to such a storm."

The 35-year-old Markle is best known for playing paralegal Rachel Zane in the TV legal drama Suits. She has also worked with the United Nations on gender equality and is a global ambassador for the charity World Vision Canada, travelling to Rwanda earlier this year to campaign for clean water.

Tabloids in Britain and beyond have jumped on the story and speculated about the relationship for weeks, with many commenting on her mixed-race heritage and contrasting her background with the prince's. The palace said the harassment has "been very public — the smear on the front page of a national newspaper; the racial undertones of comment pieces; and the outright sexism and racism of social media trolls and web article comments."

One Daily Mail headline called her a "saucy divorcee." Another described her ancestors as "a tailor, a teacher and a cleaner in racially-divided Jim Crow South — while his were ruling the British Empire." One Daily Mirror article linked Markle with an online pornography site, saying clips of her from Suits were featured on an adult site.

Harry said the commentators to pay" and that "this is all part of the game."

The palace said that Harry "strongly disagrees."

"This is not a game — it is her life and his," the statement said.

The scrutiny of the relationship drew immediate parallels to the media scrutiny of Harry's mother, the late Princess Diana, who died in a 1997 car accident while being pursued by paparazzi. It also invited comparisons to the early revelations that Kate Middleton was dating Prince William. That relationship was also the subject of relentless media attention.

But choosing to tackle the issue directly is unusual for the palace, which initially declined comment to reports in the Sunday Express newspaper on the relationship, as per its usual policy of refraining from discussions on the personal lives of the royal family.

"It's a very unusual step, I can't think of a precedent for it in recent years," said Joe Little, managing editor of Majesty magazine. "Some would regard this is something he should put up with, but that's not in his nature."

Angelina Jolie gets full custody of six children

Angelina Jolie Pitt has sole custody of her six kids.

CELEBRITY

Custody agreement reached with Brad Pitt

Angelina Jolie Pitt will continue to have sole custody of her six children with Brad Pitt in a joint agreement reached by the actors, a representative for the actress said Monday.

The voluntary agreement calls for the former couple's six children, who range in ages from eight to 15, to continue to have "therapeutic visits" with Pitt for the time being. It is unclear what therapeutic visits entailed, and Jolie Pitt's representatives could not provide additional details.

A representative for Pitt declined comment.

Monday's statement said the agreement was reached more than a week ago, although Pitt told a court on Friday that he is seeking joint custody.

Jolie Pitt filed for divorce in September, days after Pitt was involved in a disturbance during a private flight with his family. She cited irreconcilable differences as the reason for the breakup, and an attorney said at the time she filed for divorce "for the health of the family."

The agreement has not been filed in the couple's divorce, and may not be the final custody arrangement governing the actors' children.

Pitt and Jolie Pitt reached a temporary custody agreement in late September that included at least some of the same terms — visitation with his children and both sides agreeing to meetings with therapists.

"We believe that all sides are committed to healing the family and ask for your consideration during this difficult time," Monday's statement said.

The actor filed a legal response to the divorce on Friday and sought joint custody of the children. Formal custody arrangements are included in a couple's divorce judgment, although they are rarely made public in celebrity divorce cases.

Pitt's filing did not include any new details about the couple's breakup. Pitt cited irreconcilable differences and makes no mention of a prenuptial agreement that will govern how the pair divides their assets. He also cites Sept. 15 as the day of their separation, one day after the alleged plane altercation between Pitt and his 15-year-old son, Maddox.

Pitt was accused of being abusive toward the teenager, sources told The Associated Press, but authorities were not notified when the plane landed in Minnesota. Several sources said the incident was being investigated by the Los Angeles County Department of Children and Family Services, but the agency said it could not confirm whether it was involved.

Red velvet has made a big comeback. The dramatic red colour of store-bought cakes and cupcakes comes from food colouring, and they're topped with cream cheese frosting. The large amount of oil, eggs, butter and cream cheese make this a delicious indulgence, but also a nutritional disaster. This slice of cake contains half your daily calories and fat, as well as the equivalent of 17 tsp of sugar! Believe it or not, a chocolate chip muffin has over half the calories, fat and sugar.

A California single mom could go to jail for selling ceviche on Facebook. MARIZA RUELAS' GOFUNDME PAGE

A defence attorney in California says his client doesn't deserve criminal charges for taking orders through Facebook to sell homemade ceviche.

San Joaquin County Deputy Public Defender Benjamin Hall said Monday that his client is part of a new, shared economy that's evolving through social media.

Prosecutors say Stockton resident Mariza Ruelas — a single mother of six — could spend up to one year in jail for using a Facebook forum to sell specialty dishes.

Hall said his client used a hobby to create community and bring people together around food.

Kelly Daniel of the local prosecutor's office, however, says Ruelas' enterprise was more than a hobby.

Daniel says she lacked the proper business license and health inspections that protect people from serious illness and even death. Prosecutors offered Ruelas 80 hours of community service to settle the case — which she's refused.

The mother of six children says on a gofundme website she created that she never dreamed a weekend hobby with her daughters could turn out so badly.

Ruelas and her public defender could not be immediately reached by for comment.

Over dinner last week Rocio shared stories of her family's long history and how they turned Rioja's Bodegas Montecillo, a winery acquired more than 40 years ago, into one of the wine world's most recognized brands.

REVIEW

Refreshed Pathfinder is comfy, easy

Jodi Lai
AutoGuide.com

The most important remark I heard when driving people around in the Nissan Pathfinder was, "Wow, this is comfortable."

People who remember Nissan Pathfinders from back in the day remember the truck-based-SUV that, while capable off-road, was a brute and not at all easy to drive anywhere civilized. This 2017 Nissan Pathfinder, which has just been refreshed, is still built on a unibody platform, something it looks like the SUV will do for the foreseeable future.

Why will Nissan stick to unibody? Because no one actually takes their Pathfinder off-road anymore — this is a crossover aimed at families who need space and a bit of capability, not a military-grade tank. During my time with the seven-seat Pathfinder, I used it to take a day trip into wine country, visit an outlet mall, ferry around my parents, pick up some pumpkins, and take a few bags of clothing to a donation depot. The worst conditions it saw was a gravel road.

But that's not to say the Pathfinder has gone completely soft. Although there is no option to lock the car in lower gears, the Pathfinder should be able to easily handle most eventualities like a snow storm, dirt trail to the cottage, or drive across a field to get a Christmas tree.

Through a three-mode drive selector on the center console, you can choose to drive only the front wheels for maximum fuel efficiency, you can let the car decide where the power is needed in auto mode, or you can lock the rear differential for more challenging conditions.

The SUV also has a hill descent mode, which is like cruise control for driving down steep hills. It keeps the car at a crawling speed so if you are off-roading, you don't have to modulate the brakes or throttle; all you'd have to take care of is steering and making sure your wheels are pointed where you want to go.

The most standout aspect is how comfortable it is and how easy it is to drive in an urban environment.

I had no difficulty navigating the three-row SUV around condo parking garages, with the steering light enough at slow speeds to make tight turns effortless. A top-down 360-degree overhead view is displayed on screen when reversing or can be turned on at parking lot speeds, which makes things a lot easier. Even parallel parking was effortless because of that camera.

Sitting in the cushy driver's seat, you have a commanding view of the road, even with the thick A-pillar making for a pretty big blind spot. Rearward blind spots are not a huge issue, as blind-spot monitoring and large windows and side mirrors help alleviate the stress of driving such a large vehicle.

Cook returns to his kitchen

ALPINE SKIING

Podiums the primary focus in Canadian's return to health

Vincent Man
Metro | Canada

The season's first super-G race can't come soon enough for Dustin Cook. That's because the Canadian alpine skier is confident he has what it takes to earn the podium's top spot.

"I'm ready to go and I'm ready to fight for the win," Cook recently told Metro. "That's why I'm there, I'm not there for any other reason." The 27-year-old will compete in the super G — his specialty — at Lake Louise, Alta., on Nov. 27. He will also take part in the downhill the day prior.

Cook's belief in his ability stems from all the training he has endured over the last year, and not the competition — or lack thereof.

In October 2015, Cook tore the anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligaments in his right knee as well as an adductor in his left leg during a training run just days before the start of the season.

The season-ending injury was "not that fun," but a blessing in disguise. "I mean, an injury is never a fun thing to do or go through but honestly I think there were a lot of positives," Cook said.

"I got to do a lot cool stuff that normally I wouldn't get to do: have a normal life, see friends, explore some opportunities at home... And I learned a lot about myself and how much I can work."

Among those opportunities was being more hands on during fundraisers and charity events in the Ottawa region and his hometown of Lac-Sainte-Marie, Que.

Giving back to the tight-knit community of skiers back home was important for Cook because it was there where he gained the push to become a world-class ski racer.

"I have such an unbelievably strong support network up

LOOKING BACK

Cook last visited the podium at the World Cup Finals in March 2015 when he claimed gold in the super G.

there," said Cook, whose resumé includes a silver medal at the 2015 world championships. "They do everything they can and I try to give back as much as I can."

"We're in the process of creating a bursary to identify younger athletes in the area and help them on their way. There's some really cool stuff happening there."

Though he had multiple projects drawing his attention, Cook still had a focus on his return to skiing. With the advice and support from training partners and fellow Canadian Cowboys in Manny Osborne-Paradis and Erik Guay — "fortunately and unfortunately, they've had a lot of experience with injuries" — he was encouraged to regain his form.

Cook went one step further by dedicating himself in the gym.

"I feel a lot stronger than I was before," he said. "I spent eight months in the gym so I hope I'm a lot stronger than I was before."

"You might as well make the most of a bad situation. I think we did that and now I feel super strong on snow so it worked out well." In his first taste of action since the 2014-15 season, Cook competed in a giant slalom race last month in Soelden, Austria. His time wasn't fast enough to earn him a second run, but he said it was a great "mental training exercise."

"It felt totally normal to be in the gate and in that atmosphere again and see the crowd and the competitors," Cook said. "In the long run it will be an invaluable tool." This season also marks the latest world championships in St. Moritz, Switzerland, from Feb. 6-19 — a big motivator for Cook to be on top of his game.

Three months from the event, he says he's already "just refining little things" and has high expectations. "I'd be disappointed if I was only top 10. I have higher goals for sure," Cook said. "But with the amount of training I have, I feel like I'm pretty dang close to where I left off."

"I feel good and want to be back on the podium where I feel I belong and go from there."

Clemson juniors to get senior treatment

Clemson quarterback Deshaun Watson, tailback Wayne Gallman and receivers Mike Williams and Artavis Scott are heading to the NFL after this season.

Coach Dabo Swinney said Tuesday that the four juniors are graduating in December and have informed him this would be their last college season. The group will be honoured at Senior Day on Saturday when the third-ranked Tigers (9-0, 6-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) host Pitt.

"All those guys are planning on moving on," Swinney said. "Definitely want to honour them while we have an opportunity to do it. They've earned that."

The group has been essential in Clemson's rise into a national championship contender.

Watson became the first player in the Football Bowl Subdivision to throw for 4,000 yards and run for 1,000 yards last season as the Tigers won an ACC title, were ranked No. 1 in the country and reached the national championship game where they lost to Alabama.

■ Gallman set the school's single-season rushing mark with 1,527 yards. He has run 634 yards and eight touchdowns this season.

■ Williams was a 1,000-yard receiver in 2014 but missed last season with a serious neck injury. He leads the Tigers in receiving this year with 52 catches for 754 yards and five touchdowns.

■ Scott led Clemson in catches the past two seasons with 76 as a freshman in 2014 and 93 the next year. He is second on the team this season in receptions with 38 for 329 yards and three scores.

The four have kept the Tigers' offence humming along this season, although not at the levels of last fall.

Swinney said the juniors will take part in solo runs down Clemson's hill into Memorial Stadium as is the practice for seniors.

"They're more seniors to me than some of the seniors," Swinney said of his junior stars. "We try and honour the guys whose intentions are they're not going to be back." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
